Style and Flow of Thoughts

- I. Layout
- ii. Grammar
- iii. Logical Presentation
- iv. References

Reference

- An APA-7 cross-referenced bibliography format. This must set out the publications used for authoritative input to the work. Using text verbatim from other sources (except where clearly shown as such) is not acceptable - the dissertation must be original work only.

5.2.1 Any dissertation work that is not an original work, if discovered, will have the Council approved process on examination malpractice applied.

5.3 Examples of Acceptable Practices

- Quoting small sections from the works of others, typically a sentence or paragraph, provided that the author's work is fully acknowledged.
- Writing a dissertation based on previous work which you have written. The dissertation must not be identical to the previous work and must be updated where appropriate. The nature and existence of the previous work must be acknowledged, e.g 'based on my MBA dissertation completed in May 1999'.
- Information quoted should be the most up to date reasonably available.
- Your work may be typed, proof-read and critiqued by another. Their input and the extent of it must be acknowledged in the dissertation. You may ask someone else to comment on any shortcomings in your draft dissertation but any changes must be your own work.

5.4 Examples of Unacceptable Practices

- Plagiarism – that is, using the words of another author as your own.
- Submitting a previous work without authorisation or acknowledgment. For example, a dissertation you used as part of another qualification.
- Using information and data knowing them to be out dated.
- Getting a researcher to write any part of your dissertation.
- Getting a secretary, adviser, consultant, lecturer, writer or any other person to write any part of your dissertation.

5.5 Unsuitable Topics

- Purely historical, non-analytical narratives, i.e. 'The history of motor insurance'.
- 'How to .....!' or textbook guides, i.e. 'How to obtain new business'.
- Lecture notes.
- Extended job descriptions.
