CIIN At Year 2026 Ramadan Tafsir Emphasises Giving, Righteous Living, Legacy

Chartered Insurance Institute of Nigeria recently hosted its year 2026 Ramadan Tafsir at the Lagos Secretariat Central Mosque Hall, bringing together members, industry leaders and the Muslim faithful for a spiritually enriching session focused on reflection, devotion and moral responsibility.

In her welcome address, the President/Chairman of Council, Yetunde O. Ilori, described the annual Tafsir as a vital platform that reinforces the Institute’s commitment not only to professional excellence but also to ethical and spiritual growth.

Speaking on the theme, “What We Leave Behind: The Spirit and Purpose of Islamic Inheritance,” she highlighted that Islamic inheritance goes beyond wealth distribution, describing it as a divine system rooted in justice, fairness and accountability. According to her, it ensures equity among beneficiaries while promoting social balance and responsible stewardship of resources.

Mrs. Ilori urged participants to reflect on the deeper meaning of legacy, noting that beyond material possessions, individuals must strive to leave behind enduring values such as integrity, faith, knowledge and good character. She emphasized that these virtues are essential in building strong families, ethical institutions and a just society.

Chairman, Activities Committee Mr. Adeniran Aderinoye giving his speech at Year 2026 Ramadan Tafsir held at Lagos Secretariat Central Mosque Hall Alausa, Ikeja, Lagos State.

A key highlight of the Tafsir was the emphasis on giving (charity), which the guest speaker strongly encouraged as a core obligation during Ramadan and beyond. Drawing from the teachings of the Qur’an, the speaker underscored that giving should be done with sincerity, humility and consistency, not only as an act of worship but as a means of supporting the less privileged and strengthening communal bonds.

He further explained the proper approach to giving, stressing that it should follow the principles outlined in Islam—ensuring that it reaches the rightful beneficiaries, is given with pure intention, and is sustained even after the Ramadan period. This, he noted, aligns with the broader objective of fostering compassion, social responsibility and continuous generosity within society.

The discourse also focused on righteous living, with participants reminded that faith must be reflected in daily conduct. Ethical behavior, accountability and discipline, the speaker noted, are not limited to religious observances but must extend into personal life and professional practice.

Mrs. Ilori reiterated that the values discussed at the Tafsir—integrity, accountability and compassion—are closely aligned with the principles guiding the insurance profession. She encouraged members to embody these virtues in their dealings, reinforcing trust and credibility within the industry.

LASUSTECH Emerges Winner Of CIIN Ambassador's Quiz Competition

Students of Lagos State University of Science and Technology have emerged winners of the 2025/2026 Chartered Insurance Institute of Nigeria Ambassador's Quiz Competition.

The academic contest, aimed at deepening insurance literacy among undergraduates, concluded with LASUSTECH securing first place in a highly competitive session held in Lagos. University of Lagos placed second, while Lagos State University finished third.

The competition is a flagship initiative of the CIIN Insurance Brand Ambassador, Sanusi Ishola. This year's edition, themed "NextGen Insurers Knowledge Challenge," focused on bridging the gap between academic learning and the evolving demands of the insurance profession.

Winners were awarded cash prizes of ₦200,000 for first place, ₦150,000 for second place, and ₦100,000 for third place.

Speaking at the event, the President of CIIN, Yetunde Ilori, commended the participating institutions for their commitment to excellence. She encouraged students to pursue professional certification, emphasizing the vast opportunities within the insurance industry.

"You are in the right profession. Do not stop at a first degree—take the next step by qualifying as a professional through the CIIN examinations," she stated.

She also acknowledged the contributions of lecturers in Insurance and Actuarial Science departments, reaffirming the Institute's commitment to supporting students in achieving their career aspirations.

In her remarks, Banjo Kudirat, Head of the Insurance and Actuarial Science Department at LASUSTECH, praised CIIN for its sustained efforts in promoting insurance education. She highlighted the competition's role in enhancing knowledge sharing—particularly on the Nigerian Insurance Industry Reform Act (NIIRA)—while fostering healthy rivalry, collaboration, and stronger engagement between students and the industry.

The event also featured insights from the Takaful segment. Representing Noor Takaful Insurance Limited, Chief Business Development Officer Ismaeel Ayanlere encouraged students to embrace continuous learning and explore emerging opportunities within Takaful insurance.

In his closing remarks, Ambassador Sanusi Ishola expressed appreciation to participating institutions and sponsors, noting that the initiative remains instrumental in preparing the next generation of insurance professionals and narrowing the industry knowledge gap.

Insurance Leaders Rally Support For Industry Transformation And Year 2026 Insurance Week

The President and Chairman of Council delivered a compelling call to action at the Insurance Sector Transformation Consultative Forum 2026, held on 5 March 2026 at the Nigerian Insurers Association in Victoria Island, Lagos.

Addressing a distinguished gathering of industry stakeholders, she emphasised the urgent need for collective advocacy in driving the transformation of Nigeria's insurance industry. She noted that the sector is at a critical turning point, shaped by evolving economic realities, technological disruption and increasing consumer expectations.

President/Chairman Mrs. Yetunde Ilori, FIIN giving her Speech at Sector Transformation Consultative Forum 2026 held at Insurance House, Victoria Island, Lagos State.

According to her, sustainable transformation cannot be achieved in isolation. She stressed the importance of collaboration among regulators, operators and professional bodies to build a more resilient, inclusive and forward-looking insurance industry.

A major highlight of her remarks was a strong call for industry-wide support and participation in Insurance Week 2026. She described the initiative as a strategic platform to:

Increase public awareness of insurance

Improve industry visibility and perception

Deepen insurance penetration across Nigeria

Showcase innovation and professional excellence within the sector

She urged stakeholders to actively support and participate in the upcoming Insurance Week, noting that its success depends on collective ownership and engagement.

CIIN Domesticates Associateship Level Coursebooks To Strengthen Professional Insurance Education In Africa

Chartered Insurance Institute of Nigeria (CIIN) has officially announced the successful domestication of its Associateship Level Coursebooks (A01–A09), reinforcing its commitment to strengthening professional insurance education in Africa.

The Associateship qualification, the third level in the Institute’s professional certification structure, represents a critical milestone for insurance practitioners seeking advanced technical competence and professional recognition.

Previously based largely on foreign reference materials and international market contexts, the A01–A09 course books have now been comprehensively reviewed and restructured to reflect domesticated regulatory framework, socio-economic environment and evolving insurance market realities.

The newly domesticated curriculum integrates domesticated practices, regulatory requirements and supervisory guidelines, while incorporating indigenous case studies and real-life industry scenarios that mirror practical operations within the Nigerian market, without neglecting the global operations which formed the bedrock of insurance practices.

The Associateship programme comprises ten courses, including three compulsory subjects, which are Risk, Regulations and Capital Adequacy (A01), Reinsurance: Principles and Application (A02) and Finance & Accounting (A03), alongside elective course options such as Principles of Property and Pecuniary Insurances (A04); Life Assurance (A05); Motor Insurance (A06); Liability Insurances (A07); Risk Management (A08); Marketing (A09) and Insurance Broking III (A10).

Candidates are required to pass six courses, consisting of the three compulsory and any three elective courses at the Associateship Level.

With this domestication initiative, CIIN ensures that its students and members are trained with materials that directly address the realities of practicing insurance in Nigeria.

The revised texts enhance practical relevance, strengthen professional competence and align learning outcomes with the expectations of regulators, employers and industry stakeholders.

This milestone forms part of the Institute’s broader strategy to continuously modernise its educational offerings, promote professional excellence and develop insurance practitioners who are globally competitive yet firmly grounded in Nigeria’s unique market environment.

The domesticated A01–A09 course books are now available as official study materials for all candidates preparing for the Associateship examinations in soft copies while the hard copies will be available for pick up from April 1, 2026. A10 coursebook remain available in both soft and hard copies.

SDGs AND THE INSURANCE BUSINESS

Part Two: Insurance-Linked Securities And Climate Resilience in Nigeria

While impact investing focuses on funding development projects, insurance-linked securities (ILS) address a different but equally pressing issue: managing risk, particularly climate and disaster risk. Nigeria is increasingly exposed to floods, droughts, and extreme weather events that disrupt livelihoods, damage infrastructure, and strain public finances. When disasters strike, governments often rely on emergency budgets, loans, or international aid - responses that are usually slow and financially costly.

Insurance-linked securities offer an alternative approach by transferring disaster risk from governments and insurers to global capital markets. Investors are compensated for taking on this risk, and the funds become available quickly when predefined events occur. The most widely known form of ILS is the catastrophe bond, which pays out when specific triggers such as rainfall levels or river heights are reached. If the disaster does not occur, investors earn attractive returns; if it does, part of the investment is used to cover losses.

For Nigeria, catastrophe bonds could provide rapid financing after floods or other climate-related events, helping communities recover faster and reducing long-term economic damage. More importantly, they shift disaster response from a reactive model to a planned and predictable one. This improves fiscal stability and allows governments to focus on rebuilding rather than scrambling for funds.

An emerging extension of this idea is green insurance-linked securities, which combine risk transfer with environmental objectives. These instruments can be designed so that proceeds support climate-resilient infrastructure, renewable energy, or ecosystem restoration projects such as mangrove reforestation and flood control systems. In Nigeria, green ILS could play a role in protecting vulnerable coastal regions, strengthening water management systems, and supporting adaptation to climate change.

When insurance-linked securities are aligned with impact investing principles, their potential grows even further. Investors not only earn returns and diversify their portfolios but also contribute to resilience and sustainable development. However, for Nigeria to fully benefit from ILS, strong institutions, reliable risk data, and clear regulatory frameworks are essential. Collaboration between government agencies, insurers, development partners, and international investors will be key.

Ultimately, insurance-linked securities represent more than a financial innovation, they are a tool for resilience. By embracing ILS alongside impact investing, Nigeria can attract global capital, manage climate risks more effectively, and build a more secure foundation for long-term sustainable development.
