CIIN Seals Institutional Partnership With Insurance Meets Tech On 5th Edition

Chartered Insurance Institute of Nigeria (CIIN) has extended its institutional partnership with Insurance Meets Tech (IMT), lending its professional and institutional support to the fifth edition of the annual insurance and technology conference, scheduled to be held on Friday, November 20, 2026, at the Balmoral Event Centre, Sheraton Hotel, Ikeja, Lagos.

This renewed partnership reflects both institutions' shared commitment to advancing meaningful conversations on innovation, professional development, and the future of insurance in Nigeria, while strengthening the connection between the insurance profession and the wider technology ecosystem.

This milestone year, the 5th edition, under the theme "Building Insurance That Connects," IMT 5.0 will convene insurance professionals, technology leaders, regulators, innovators, entrepreneurs, investors, and other stakeholders to examine how technology, collaboration, and new ideas can help create a more connected, accessible, and responsive insurance industry.

L-R: President, Chartered Insurance Institute of Nigeria, Akinjide Orimolade and Founder/Convener of Insurance Meets Tech and Chief Executive Officer, Create Urban, Odion Aleobua at the event

Speaking on the institutional partnership, which was sealed today in Lagos, President/Chairman of Council, Chartered Insurance Institute of Nigeria (CIIN), Mr. Akinjide Orimolade, FFIN, said, "As the industry continues to evolve, we must ensure that innovation is matched by competence, professionalism and a clear understanding of the customer we ultimately serve. This is why CIIN continues to lend its full institutional weight to platforms such as Insurance Meets Tech. IMT provides an important space for the insurance community to have honest conversations, challenge old assumptions, and collectively consider what a more connected, technology-driven, and future-ready industry should look like. Our partnership with IMT for this 5th edition is a reaffirmation of that commitment, and we are confident this year's conversations will move the industry closer to the innovative future we all envision"

Speaking on the partnership, Founder/Convener of Insurance Meets Tech (IMT) and Chief Executive Officer, Create Urban Odion Aleobua, stated: "CIIN's continued institutional support speaks to the credibility this platform has built over the years. It reflects an industry that recognises IMT as more than an event, but as a genuine driver of change within the insurance and technology space. This partnership strengthens our ability to convene the right stakeholders, drive the right conversations, and deliver solutions for an industry that must keep evolving. As we approach the 5th edition, our commitment remains to position IMT as a trusted platform where the future of insurance in Nigeria is actively shaped."

Over the past four editions, Insurance Meets Tech has established itself as a platform for dialogue between the insurance and technology sectors, bringing together industry leaders and emerging innovators to examine technology's role in shaping the future of insurance.

This fifth edition will build on that foundation with high-level panel discussions, keynote sessions, technology showcases, and networking opportunities focused on digital transformation, emerging technologies, professional development, customer experience, and the broader evolution of the insurance ecosystem.

About Insurance Meets Tech (IMT)

Insurance Meets Tech (IMT) is West Africa's leading annual insurance and technology conference, dedicated to promoting collaboration between the insurance industry and the technology ecosystem.

CIIN President Akinjide Orimolade Tasks Insurers, Policyholders on Economic Resilience at Independence

The President and Chairman of Council, Chartered Insurance Institute of Nigeria (CIIN), Mr. Akinjide Orimolade FIIN, has urged insurance operators, government authorities and the public to prioritise risk management and asset protection as crucial pillars for national economic growth.

In his Independence Day goodwill message to the insurance industry and the nation, Orimolade highlighted that economic sovereignty must be backed by structural financial safety nets.

He noted that a resilient insurance sector provides the necessary safety cushion for businesses to innovate, investments to thrive, and individuals to preserve capital amidst economic shifts.

According to him, the sector remains pivotal in building a self-sustaining economy through sustainable risk mitigation strategies and capacity development.

Orimolade reiterated the commitment of his administration to executing his three-pillar tenure agenda, which focuses on deepening digital transformation, enforcing compulsory insurance compliance, and driving manpower development through continuous professional education.

He highlighted that the Institute is setting up an Insur Tech Learning Hub to build capacity in artificial intelligence, cybersecurity and emerging risk models, while expanding insurance education across tertiary institutions to groom young professionals.

He charged underwriting firms and insurance brokers to leverage modern technology to streamline product distribution, automate claims management, and deepen penetration across untapped markets in Nigeria.

He also emphasised the need for operators to adhere strictly to professional ethics and enforce compliance with compulsory insurance covers to strengthen public confidence in the market.

CIIN President reassured the National Insurance Commission (NAICOM) and all partners of the willingness of the Institute to collaborate on regulatory and policy frameworks aimed at accelerating financial inclusion and national development.

CIIN Promotes Professional Excellence At BusinessDay Insurance Conference 2026

Chartered Insurance Institute of Nigeria (CIIN) reaffirmed its commitment to setting high industry standards at the BusinessDay Insurance Conference 2026, held on Wednesday, September 23, 2026, at the Oriental Hotel, Victoria Island, Lagos.

Centred on the theme “From Capital to Capacity: Driving Growth, Innovation and Trust in Nigeria’s Insurance Sector,” the event gathered top regulators, investors, and insurance leaders to address critical priorities, including recapitalisation, technical capacity building, product innovation, and restoring public trust.

A major highlight of the conference was a keynote address delivered by the Registrar/CEO of CIIN, Dr. Abimbola Tiamiyu, FIIN.

Dr. Tiamiyu emphasized the Institute’s key role in supporting regulatory frameworks, fostering technical expertise, and equipping professionals to translate increased capital into stronger underwriting capacity and sustainable service delivery across the sector.

Throughout the sessions, participants explored strategies for leveraging regulatory developments and digital technology to drive penetration and build long-term policyholder confidence.

As the statutory body for professional standards and ethical conduct in Nigeria’s insurance space, CIIN continues to drive professional education, capacity-building initiatives, and strategic industry collaboration to nurture a resilient, trusted, and forward-looking market.

INDUSTRY NEWS

NAICOM, NIA Move To Strengthen Implementation Of NIIRA, RBC

The Nigerian Insurers Association (NIA) has reaffirmed its commitment to collaborating with the National Insurance Commission (NAICOM) to advance critical market initiatives, including the implementation of the Nigerian Insurance Industry Reform Agenda (NIIRA) 2025 and the Risk-Based Capital (RBC) framework.

This pledge was made during a courtesy visit by the leadership of the NIA, led by its Chairman, Mrs. Ebelechukwu Nwachukwu, to the management of NAICOM in Abuja.

The visit provided a strategic platform for both institutions to deliberate on key regulatory directions, market solvency, and operational frameworks designed to enhance industry resilience and foster long-term growth.

During the engagement, discussions centered on aligning operator preparedness with regulatory expectations surrounding NIIRA 2025 and evaluating progress on the transition toward the Risk-Based Capital framework.

Both parties also exchanged views on broader industry growth drivers, including:

Market Penetration: Formulating joint strategies to expand insurance uptake and bridge the coverage gap across key demographics.

Operational Soundness: Enhancing risk-management standards, regulatory compliance, and operational efficiency across underwriting firms.

Consumer Confidence: Strengthening policyholder protection mechanisms to boost public trust and safeguard market stability.

Mr. Babatunde Fajemirokun, Deputy Chairman, Nigerian Insurers Association (NIA); Mrs. Bola Odukale, Director-General, NIA; Mr. Ekerete Ola Gam-Ikon, Deputy Commissioner for Finance and Administration, National Insurance Commission (NAICOM); Mrs. Nwachukwu Ebelechukwu, Chairman, NIA; Mr. Olusegun Ayo Omosehin, Commissioner for Insurance, National Insurance Commission (NAICOM); Dr. Usman Jankara Jimada, Deputy Commissioner, Technical, National Insurance Commission (NAICOM); Mr. Ezekiel Isueth; and Mr. Olamide Olajobi.

Post-Recapitalisation: Trust Remains Insurance Industry's Most Valuable Asset — NAICOM

Although the recent recapitalisation exercise has significantly boosted the financial strength of insurance operators in Nigeria, public trust and consumer confidence remain the most vital assets the industry must protect, the National Insurance Commission (NAICOM) has declared.

Speaking at the 2026 Insurance Professionals' Forum held in Abeokuta, Ogun State, the Commissioner for Insurance and Chief Executive Officer of NAICOM, Olusegun Omosehin, emphasised that insurance ultimately rests on a fundamental promise—that a policyholder who pays a premium today can count on the insurer to settle a legitimate claim tomorrow.

Commissioner for Insurance Mr. Olusegun Omosehin.

Omosehin asserted that no level of capital, technological adoption, or regulatory framework can substitute for a deficit of public trust.

“Policyholders pay premiums today based on confidence that insurers will honour valid obligations tomorrow,” the NAICOM boss stated, describing trust as sacred to the survival of the sector.

According to the Commissioner, the real benchmark for measuring the success of the recapitalisation exercise lies beyond the numerical expansion of balance sheets.

Instead, it will be defined by an insurer's capacity to:

Retain larger domestic risks and reduce unnecessary capital flight.

Invest continuously in technology and human capital.

Maintain solvency and resilience during economic shocks.

“A resilient insurer is one that remains solvent during economic stress, honours its obligations during crises, and retains the confidence of policyholders under all circumstances,” he added.

SDGs AND THE INSURANCE BUSINESS

The Role of Insurance in Achieving National Climate Goals (Part 2)

Beyond paying claims, the insurance industry influences behaviour and investment decisions that shape long-term climate outcomes. Through underwriting standards, pricing, and risk assessments, insurers can encourage climate-resilient practices. Properties built to higher standards, businesses that invest in risk reduction, and farmers who adopt climate-smart techniques can be rewarded with more favourable insurance terms. In this way, insurance becomes a tool not only for recovery, but also for prevention.

Equally important is the role insurers play as long-term investors. Managing substantial pools of capital, insurers have the capacity to direct funds toward projects that support Nigeria's climate goals. Globally, insurers are increasingly integrating environmental, social, and governance (ESG) principles into their investment strategies, supporting renewable energy, resilient infrastructure, and sustainable technologies. In Nigeria, aligning insurance investments with climate priorities can help bridge financing gaps in renewable energy, climate-smart agriculture, and resilient housing - sectors critical to both mitigation and adaptation.

Climate-conscious investment also protects insurers themselves. Assets exposed to climate transition risks may lose value over time, while sustainable investments can offer more stable, long-term returns. By integrating climate considerations into investment decisions, insurers strengthen their balance sheets while contributing to national and global sustainability objectives.

Collaboration further amplifies the industry's impact. Partnerships with regulators, government agencies, development institutions, and meteorological bodies improve data quality, product design, and market reach. Such cooperation ensures that insurance solutions are inclusive, practical, and aligned with Nigeria's broader development agenda. While challenges such as low insurance penetration and affordability remain, addressing them through innovation and policy support is increasingly urgent as climate risks intensify.
